*Includes one queen (Athaliah).

†In a coregency the kings ruled together; in overlapping reigns they reigned separately; in a vice-regency a son ruled with his father in a subordinate position.

‡These kings and one queen were assassinated.

§A dynasty is a succession of rulers who are members of the same family or a single ruler of a family different from those before and after him. (The kings of Judah were all of one dynasty because they were all descendants of David.)

Evangelical scholars differ on the dates of Obadiah and Joel. Some place them at later dates (see the Introductions to Joel and Obad.)

Note: In some kings' reigns the dates (e.g., Rehoboam, 931-913), when subtracted, may vary from the number in the "Years" column for that king. This is because the beginning and ending dates for a given king may include only portions of those years in the Gregorian calendar.

The dates of the kings are adapted from Edwin R. Thiele, The Mysterious Numbers of the Hebrew Kings. 3rd ed. Grand Rapids: Zondervan Publishing House, 1963.
